

Tony Nevin
BSc (Hons) Ost, D.O.
Osteopath

Graduated in 1988. After a brief spell working in the Far East he set up practice in Cheltenham, followed by Stroud a few years later.

He has always had a passion for all animals and it wasn't long before he branched out into animal work, whilst maintaining his keen interest in helping his people patients.

Wanting to always offer the best possible service Tony knew the only option was to integrate himself into existing veterinary clinics.

As well as running busy clinics he also lectures and runs exciting workshops bringing people and their animals closer together.

About Osteopathy

Osteopathy mainly looks at issues affecting normal movement and function throughout the body. It is classed as a manually applied form of medicine, and since the passing of the Osteopaths Act 1993, and the creation of the General Osteopathic Council, is classified as a Primary Healthcare Profession for people.

All osteopaths treating animals must only do so through direct referral from a veterinary surgeon. It is a criminal act otherwise.

By working within a dedicated veterinary clinic we can offer the highest standard of treatment and care for your pet.

Some of the problems that may benefit from osteopathy

- Stiffness in the neck
- Stiff back, sometimes arched
- Tail tucked under, or loss of movement
- Lameness in any of the legs
- Changes in behaviour
- Altered appetite
- Reluctance to move or exercise
- Pain during or following exercise
- Altered behavior in bitches post whelping
- Motion sickness especially in cars

Our Services

We offer osteopathic care for all of your pets, including exotics. We have pioneered the successful application of osteopathy to many species of animals and birds and have a keen passion to see your loved ones returned to their normal, healthy selves. By working closely with the rest of the veterinary and allied professions we strive to make any treatment programme as stress free, and enjoyable for everyone concerned.

Although your own vet will have taken a full case history of any problems we will also take one of our own. We will discuss treatment options, as well as the prognosis, before working with you and your vet to resolve your pets problem.

General Osteopathic Council (GOsC) registered
Member of the British Osteopathic Association (BOA)

Referrals

We happily accept referral patients from other vets and will always send a report covering treatment, and outcomes back to your own vet.
